Device Manufacturers, Insurers, and Patients:
How Healthcare Reform Affects Us All

Healthcare is one of but a few factors that profoundly affect the quality of life people enjoy. There is general agreement that the healthcare system in the United States would benefit from reform. Yet, after years of debate and the passage of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act in Congress, there is still not general agreement about what those reforms should look like or the impact the bill passed in the United States Congress will have on both providers and consumers of healthcare. For this reason it remains a dynamic aspect of public policy at both the federal and state levels.

CIANJ’s Healthcare August Roundtable will bring together a wide array of professionals whose combined efforts make up the diverse mosaic that is our current healthcare system. A panel representing three dimensions of healthcare will offer their perspective on how the recent legislation will play out and their suggestions for how best to respond to the changes. A far reaching dialogue among attendees will surely reveal additional aspects for consideration. While full implementation of the legislation is years away, anyone interested in how the implementation of healthcare reforms are moving forward should be on hand.
